PRESIDENT AND ADMINISTRATION.

Only a month ago The Tribune called the attention of the country to the fact that the Illinois Democratic convention had declared that all the power of the Democracy in Congress and out of it, in the hands of the Democratic party, should be used in a manner to secure the repeal of the McKinley law. It was pointed out that the Democratic party was pledged to the repeal of that law, and that as a consequence the Democrats were practically pledged to the Wilson bill. The Democratic platform in Illinois was adopted by the Democratic convention in Chicago, and the Democratic party, by the adoption of that platform, pledged itself to the repeal of the McKinley law. The Democratic party in Illinois, in the platform adopted by the convention in Chicago, declared that the Democratic party, in the event of its success in the election, would repeal the McKinley law. A GREAT HISTORICAL CHAPTER.

A paper by Mr. A. L. Bowen in the August Forum upon "The Transformation of New England" suggests many suggestive questions as to the changes which have been going on in that section during the last few years and which promise to accelerate with the march that before many years the original and primitive and puritan population will have disappeared or will be overlaid by a population of foreign descent, the ancestors of which have been newly added to citizenship. A hundred years ago New England was an area entirely occupied by people who were parts of Essex and New Hampshire. The population was further to all its characteristics. Mr. Bowen's statistics show that out of a population in Massachusetts of 1,783,085 in 1885 the foreign born numbered 363,320, not including the native born children of aliens. This great increase of aliens has been almost entirely in the manufacturing towns, though a large proportion is engaged in agriculture, the fisheries, and other branches of labor. The increase in manufacturing industries is largely composed of French Canadians who, as readily appears in the statistics of schools, have drawn their teachers, schools, and priests, and of course their religion, with a Roman Catholic. The great influx of immigrants of the Irish population has given New York about one-fifth of the population of Massachusetts and the control of social and political affairs. The growth of the Roman Catholic church in Massachusetts during the past century has been remarkable. The first Bishop of the new century would be a startling surprise to Quincy, Sumner, and Hancock were they now here, dead and in.

TALK OF LONDON TOWN.

GERMAN WILLIAM KNOWS A GOOD INVESTMENT ON THE EXCHANGE.

The New Fire Chief of the British Empire Is Stuck with Something He Can't Get Rid Of—Some Jobs Not to Be Envied—The Fate of the Last Widower to Contract Something about Tammany's Passion.

London, July 27.—The German Emperor has the consolation of having made his visit to England to the end of both a profitable and an enjoyable one. He has left behind him a host of friends, and has come into contact with the Britishers now and then of Saturday and Sunday when he motored down to the park for his own amusement. The accident of the visit has developed a certain affection for the Kaiser on the part of the British people. The manner of his departure from Cowes was also such as to please the British public. The Emperor and Empress and their children were all on board the royal yacht when she steamed out of the harbor, and the Kaiser himself stood on the bridge and waved his cap in response to the cheers of the crowds on the shore and on the boats in the harbor. The Emperor's visit to the Isle of Wight was the first visit of any of the royal family to the island since the death of Queen Victoria, and the Prince of Wales was anxious that the Kaiser should be received with all the honors due to the head of a friendly power. The Emperor himself appreciated the fact that he was the first of the royal family to visit the island since the death of his grandmother, and showed considerable feeling in the matter. The old general interest in the Kaiser and the Prince of Wales was heightened by the news of the latest addition to the royal family, and the Emperor's visit to the Isle of Wight was the occasion of a demonstration of loyalty and affection which the most ardent supporters of the monarchy could not have surpassed in fervor. The Emperor and the Prince of Wales also went to the races at Goodwood, and the Kaiser was present at the Goodwood ball given by the Duke and Duchess of Richmond. The Emperor himself contributed to the success of the visit by the tact which he displayed in his relations with the people. He was careful to avoid the slightest appearance of patronage, and showed himself in every way a thoroughly democratic monarch. He was also careful to avoid any appearance of favoritism among the English people, and his visit to Lord Rosebery at Dalmeny was followed by a visit to the Duke of Devonshire at Chatsworth. The Emperor's visit to Lord Rosebery was the occasion of much comment, as it was the first visit which the Liberal leader has received from any member of the royal family since the death of Queen Victoria. The Emperor's visit to Chatsworth was also the occasion of much comment, as the Duke of Devonshire is the leader of the Liberal Unionists, who have been the most bitter opponents of Home Rule in the House of Commons. The Emperor's visit to Chatsworth was therefore regarded as a sign that the Liberal Unionists were willing to forget the past and to work with the Liberal party in the future for the good of the country. The Emperor's visit to Chatsworth was also the occasion of a demonstration of loyalty and affection on the part of the people of Derbyshire, a great county, and one of the most important in the kingdom. The Emperor's visit to the Duke of Devonshire, which was the occasion of a demonstration of loyalty and affection on the part of the people of Derbyshire, a great county, and one of the most important in the kingdom. WORKING IN AT THE DOOR.

EXPERIENCE COMES AND LOOKS ON HOPEFULLY FOR EMPLOYMENT.

The Secret Doorway of the Continental Stock Hanging and the Collection of Commercial Data Outside for the Information of a Chicago Man Constitute Reports of the Wisest Suffrage Supporters This Morning Would Wish Wise.

A dispatch from Chicago to the Portland Oregonian says: Look over the help wanted ads. any morning, and you will find in the midst of the flood of appeals for boys, girls, men and women, a great variety and number of requests for the services of the middle aged. Experience is the desideratum of the business world, and the man who has it is in demand. This is the reason why so many men who have passed the forty mile post are looking anxiously over the help wanted columns of the newspapers. They are afraid that the years are beginning to tell against them, and that the best chances of the world are going to younger men. Many of them have been out of employment for months, and the longer they remain out the more hopeless their case becomes. They are willing to work at anything, and are ready to accept any kind of employment that will bring them in a few dollars a week. A LATE HOUR OF A SUNDAY NIGHT.

The Simple Way to Illuminate the Streets Here.

The simplest way to illuminate the glare of the lights of Broadway, Fifth avenue and Madison square, New York, is to string the streets with lighting globes. With a little practical thought, the whole city could be illuminated. Several electricity and engineering men have suggested that it would be economical will wash clothes, will clean house—will do it well—will save you time; labor; wear and tear; will relieve drudgery; will not hurt your hands; your clothes or paint, and besides will cost you no more than common bar soap. One honest trial will prove all that. Why not accept the testimony of the millions who use it, as proof of its virtue. Among your friends you'll find those who have used Pearline for years—ask them—they will tell you "can't do without it."

Beware

Pearline is the original Washing Compound made by millions, and imitated by thousands who peddle their stuff on representation that it is "the same as" or "as good as" Pearline. Pearline is never peddled, and with honest grocers, you never get it unless you ask for it. 288 JAMES PYLE, New York.
